We worked really well together. We split up the work evenly: I worked on the HTML/CSS interface, and part of the searchEngine code. I wrote the first draft of the report, as well as the PowerPoint. John worked on the backend of the web interface, and wrote the rest of the searchEngine code. From there, reviewing and improving both our code and our reports was the result of very useful discussion and collaboration. This has been one of the most successful group projects I've worked on.
